Survey

Survey is the discipline that teaches "to make judgments about the sum of money that can be given, to any economic well being valued, to meet certain practical requirements".

There are two branches of this discipline: the private (microsurvey) and the public (macrosurvey).

Our staff work in both branches and is able to formulate an estimation judgment in the following areas:

- The extent to which referred to the rural, rustic funds, farm buildings, business inventories, tree nurseries, land improvements, damage to crops, the division of consortium contributions, the estimates of the woods, etc. (quantity surveying agriculture and forestry);
- The scope that extends to the construction and industrial sector (civil and industrial valuation);
